Advertising Poster Wearwell Cycles. Original antique lithograph poster for the British cycling company Wearwell Cycles (since 1867). Victorian style design featuring a fashionable lady in an elegant dress with a feathered hat riding a bicycle and a gentleman with a moustache in a smart outdoor sporting outfit riding next to her and holding her arm as they both look towards trees on the side of a country road where presumably another couple have left their bikes to do something in the woods. A stick-on sign that reads Trespassers Will Be Prosecuted was attached to the poster on the bushes and next to the steps, and the title text in bold red and white stylised lettering above and below. Great image that would appeal to any steampunk fans. The Wearwell Cycle Company was a bicycle manufacturing company founded in 1889 in Wolverhampton by the five sons of Henry Clarke, founder of the late Cogent Cycle Company. Wearwell were also motorcycle manufacturers under the Wearwell Stevens, Wolf and Wulfruna brands. The company produced motorcycles until the outbreak of World War II, from which point they manufactured only bicycles. The factory was partly destroyed by fire during an air raid but some production was soon restored. After World War II production of cycles continued and motorcycle production resumed. By the middle of the 20th Century, 75% of the company's production was exported to over 30 different countries. The company began sponsoring a professional cycle team through the 1950s, winning the Tour of Britain cycle race in 1953, which was amongst the team's best domestic racing highlights. Riders in the victorious Wearwell Cycle Company Team were Les Scales, John Pottier, Ian Greenfield, Trevor Fenwick, Ken Mitchell and John Welch. Good condition, large tear on top left margin that was repaired with tape on reverse and the glue seeped through the image, small hole on top left corner, light folds, staining near the hole and on top margin, small tears, small sign attached to the poster as mentioned in the description, edges possibly trimmed. Travel Poster Paris Railway Buffet Notre Dame Cathedral. Original vintage travel poster advertising Paris. The poster features an illustration of Notre-Dame, one of the most iconic landmarks in the French Capital. The leafless branches of trees leaning into the left frame of the composition add to the gothic architecture of the Cathedral as well as to the sombre feel of poster overall. Buffets (1928 1999) expressionist style is visible in the bold confident strokes of black in the structure of the composition and even in the peculiar font chosen for his name and date at the top of the poster. It seems that we are capturing a glimpse of cold winter as the bridge above the Seine stands alone before Notre Dame. The colour palette is comprised of deep earthy browns and greens, juxtaposed against the blue sky. This poster was commissioned by The French Railway Company in 1963 to famous French painter Bernard Buffet to create a poster for the city of Paris. Very good condition, creasing. War Poster WWI Recruitment Fight For Freedom UK. Original vintage WWI recruiting poster published by the Parliamentary Recruiting Committee reading 'Fight for Freedom with the Strength of Free Men' with the text printed in white against a green background. Printed by Roberts & Leete Ltd., London. Tasked with boosting enlistment in the armed forces, the Parliamentary Recruiting Committee occupied a central place in the governments wartime communications machinery. Although the technology to enable the relatively inexpensive mass production of high quality images had been in existence for over a century, the First World War saw the first extensive use of posters for propaganda purposes. The Parliamentary Recruiting Committee (PRC) was a thirty member body organized by political party organizers, under the supervision of the War Office, with the express aim of aiding the raising of troop numbers in Britain's volunteer army. The main modes of appeal were through mass recruiting rallies and through posters and pamphlets that encouraged enlistment. Within a few weeks of the outbreak of the war the designs of poster began to incorporate striking graphic images. Some 200 different posters were produced and distributed by the PRC over the course of the War. War posters were intended to be ephemeral and never meant to be archival or historical documents. Yet, because of the content of the messages they projected they have become an important resource by which we can today explore the mind set of those who believed passionately in the rightness of the cause and the necessity to wage War between 1914 and 1918.
